PACIFIC NORTHWEST SINGER/SONGWRITER TO FIRST MUSIC SINGLE SINCE MOVING TO NASHVILLE.

CASSIA DAWN'S SONG "SIMPLY" DEBUTS 7/14/23

Cassia Dawn has spent the last 13 years performing on the streets, fairs and festivals of the Pacific Northwest. Her Happy-Go-Lucky approach to life mixed with Oregon grit gives her a story to tell, and now she's telling it in Nashville.

Her newest single release, "Simply," introduces the complicated feelings of both wanting to be seen, but being afraid of rejection. The first draft of the song was written in a closet, telling the story of being both imperfect and lovable simultaneously.

"A closet is the place most people go to hide, but I couldn't hide anymore. I was sitting on the floor, guitar in hand, trying to process the impending end of a relationship. I was staring down the barrel of what I couldn't control, and couldn't save. Not only that, but it seemed to confirm one of my deepest fears - when people really see me, they leave.

I can't tell you exactly how, but in that moment light met me. In that place, surrounded by tears, snot and a notepad, I felt myself let go. I realized I had been trying to make myself lovable, trying to silence the voices that said I wasn't enough, when my whole life God, my family and friends were saying the opposite." - Cassia Dawn
